Nature reserve and open-air geological museum of Tata

This special geological nature reserve has been located on a 3.5 acre land on Kálvária (i.e. Calvary) Hill in Tata since 1953. It has also functioned as an open-air geological museum since 1991.

The nature reserve displays the geological episodes, flora and fauna of millions of years, as well as botanical, cultural and mining history curiosities.

It plays an important role in the education of Hungarian geology, cartography, geophysics, meteorology, environmental studies and geography students.

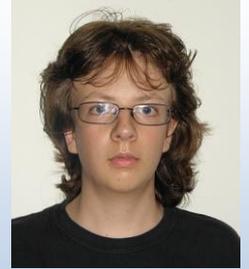

The University (ELTE) was appointed as the trustee of the unique nature reserve in 1994, and with the financial help of the Environmental Fund it was improved between 1995 and 1997. ☒

The formation of the secondary school

A year later Count Ferenc Esterházy fostered the building of a catholic secondary school so he contacted Gergely Tapolcsányi the leader of the Piarist order. The charter of foundation was issued on the 1st of January, in 1765 with the approval of Queen Maria Theresa the letter of foundation contained the responsibilities of the Esterházy family and the Piarist order, who directed the secondary school.

Ferenc Esterházy donated an empty building next to the family's palace and a considerable sized yard and garden. The land provided was situated on the south-eastern shores of the Old Lake, today it belongs to the secondary school and the monastery.

According to the charter of foundation the first academic year started on the 13th of November, in 1765. The secondary school served as a six form secondary school until 1849.
